To Mr. John Harvey,

Bellement.

Jefferson was born at Shadwell, Albemarle Co., Va., April 2d, O. S. 1743, and was therefore not quite seventeen when the letter was penned. This appeal to Col Harvey, who was his guardian, his father having died when he was but twelve years old, was successful, and in the spring of 1760, he entered William and Mary's college, which, at that time, was under most excellent management.

Ch Lady! when along the vale Of years departed, memory strays, More odors waft upon the gale, And sweeter sound the wild birds lays. The loved one's smile-affection's kiss-And friends in youth too fondly cherished, Shine forth with beams of brightest bliss, With hopes that only rose and perished. Each transient flower of past delight, With brightened fragrance blooms anew: And Time with desolating blight Adds richer tints to every hue: So when these fleeting hours depart, And age with palsied form appears, Thy lays will still enchant the heart More sweetly by the lapse of years. Call this not flattery-my lyre Ne'er followed adulation's train-Ne'er swelled the band of Slavery's choir, Though warbling forth a lowly strain. Then deign again to tune that lyre : Believe me, Lady ! there's a charm Bounds forth from every latent wire, That misery's sting can oft disarm. While fancy soars with pinions free-While youth with bueyant spirit plays-While hope and joy dance torth for thee, Oh! then resume thy pleasing lays. Soon, soon the spring of youth departs-And transient are its lovliest flowers, Then touch the string e're misery smarts, Or blighting winter strips the bowers. Jeffersonville Springs, Ind. Gonnon.
